6	Personal filing 103: How and what to archive - Simpler Living - Naomi Seldin - timesunion.com - Albany NY 01/28/2010 - Mainstream Personal filing 101: Setting up a personal filing system Here's the final post of his series: A successful home filing system has three components: intermediate storage and archival storage. This post, the last in a series of three articles, will discuss archival storage. This is the part of the filing system that ensures that important papers you need to hold on to, but may not need for several years, are easily available to you. You will need a filing cabinet, a plastic filing box or some cardboard banker's boxes (like this one). You'll keep them somewhere in your home, but they don't need to be front and center. Possible places for this cabinet are the basement (if it's dry), an unused bedroom or closet, or even a space in the back of a closet. You may also need hanging files, labels and manila files to fit into the hanging files. FILES TO INCLUDE The closing information on your home (if you own a home). 6	Eco-Briefs Atlanta INtown Paper 02/03/2010 - Mainstream collin on Monday, 1 February 2010 On the wings of Oakhurst Community Garden Project's wildly popular Chicks in the City classes comes a full morning of urban poultry-keeping. On Saturday, Feb. 6, the Chicks in the City Symposium offers attendees a full plate of essentials on backyard chickens. Taught by local experts, the six sessions highlight how-tos from coop design to breeds and from chicken illnesses to getting started with backyard poultry. Along with partners Georgia Organics, Decatur Active Living, and the Chicken Whisperer, Inc., the Oakhurst Community Garden turns our attention toward local food and sustainable practices with this community-focused event. The symposium runs from 8:15 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and will be held at the Decatur Recreation Center, 231 Sycamore St. Cost is $65. Oakhurst Community Garden Project members, Georgia Organics members, and City of Decatur residents pay just $50. Pre-registration is requested and limited to the first 100 registrants. 6	Worth a thousand wounds... - The Barrie Examiner - Ontario, CA 02/06/2010 - Blog Sue Kay poured heartache onto canvas after losing her sister to cancer, paving the way for an event that supports RVH When Sue Kay lost her sister Elizabeth "Libby" Hopps to colon cancer in 1995, the pain was too deep to express in words. But not in paint. The local artist and interior designer sat down and dipped her brush into a pot of colour and poured her heartache onto a piece of canvas. This work became known as Libby's Cove as it represented a misty Georgian Bay view from the family cottage. It was also one of her sister's favourite places. Moving her brush along the canvas was Kay's way of moving through her grief and yet she knew that this painting had much potential far beyond her own sadness. "I knew that I wanted this painting to commemorate my sister in some way, but I also wanted to make a difference for others going through cancer," says Kay. "I don't have the means to just write a cheque to RVH and I'm not a physician who can help a cancer patient feel better, but I can paint. And I needed ...thebarrieexaminer.com	"home makeovers"

6	Once upon a time, a family moved to Mozambique. They searched and searched for a house while they lived all together in one room of a guesthouse. After 8 long weeks, God graciously provided a rental home for them. Then the cost of fuel and the toll road and long commute to school each day forced them to move yet again. God graciously provided another rental home for them, close to school, and their commuting days were over...until the landlord more than doubled the rent. The family again began the search for a suitable home and, in addition to this, a place for 12 interns to live near them. God graciously and amazingly provided a house big enough for ALL of them to live together. Yes, it was in bad repair and required days upon days upon weeks of labor to get it livable, but they were happy. Happier still when they all got to move in to their new home together! The very large and happy family still lives in this rental house today, BUT, th...schmidtsinmozambique.blogspot.com	"home makeovers"

7	Staging Your Home to Sell Does Not Have to Be Hard...Have Fun With It!! As a professional Home Staging Expert I have the privilege of helping hundreds of sellers with the preparation of their home. I find it fun and challenging, but in the end it is always rewarding as we hear of the great news that another house sold and sold quickly. When staging your home to sell it is important the selling features of your home be evident to the potential buyers. It does not have to be a hard process. Remember this...what is the buyer ACTUALLY BUYING?? When they purchase your home, they are not purchasing your furniture or artwork, they are purchasing your flooring, cabinetry, countertops, fireplace, architectural elements of the home. We need to show them these things. They are also looking for SPACE...BUYERS LOVE SPACE.
